to the parties who innocently bought it. Memorial Window in Bisadford.

The Ladies' Memorial Association, through whom they were ordered, has been notified by Tiffany, of New York, that the memorial windows to be erected in historic old Biandford Church by the States of Alabama, South Carolina, Tennessee and Mississippi, in memory of their Confederate dead buried in Biandford Cemetery, have been completed and are awiting orders for shipment. Blandford Church has been converted by the Ladies' Memorial Association into a beautiful memorial chapel, and a place has been reserved for a window to be crected by each Southern State in commemoration of its dead heroes whose remains rest in the cemetery. Virginia, North Carolina, Louisiana and Missouri have already contributed their windows and it is probable that one date will be arranged for the unveiling of the four just completed, and that proper ceremonies will mark the occasion.

The windows are of full size. Each bears the figure of one of the apostles and the scal of the respective State with an appropriate inscription. All are of like design and cost $400 cach. The association would not want any one window to be superior or of more costly quality or design than another. evening the North Carolina Grand Lodge of Masons will convene in its 123d annual session, with Hon. S. M. Gattis, of Hillshoro, presiding as grand master. This will be the second session of the Grand Lodge in the splendid $100,000 temple here, and the first one to be held in the temple with thorough equipment. The reports of officers will show that Masonry has grown during the year from a membership of 18,940 to unwards of 20,000, and the receipts of the Grand Lodge for the year have been $16,450, as against $11,000 for the year previous. There are to be charters granted at this session of the Grand Lodge to twenty-one new lodges now operating under special dispensation. At the last annual communication the Grand Lodge chartered only seven new lodges formed during the previous year. This is the close of the second term for Grand Master Gattis, and, following the usual custom, he will not aspire to another term, it being a rule of the order in this State that no grand master serves longer than two terms.

Portraits of Governors Now Hang in New Quarters.

The collection of pictures in the State Portrait Gallery has been removed from the old quarters to the new reading-room of the State Library. From the walls the Governors of the Colony and of the Commonwealth now look down upon the Virginians of the present day. The Governors' portraits have been arranged in order, beginning with the earliest, at the northeast corner of the room. The entire collection extends around nearly three sides of the large room, and in some cases they are desided—that is, are placed one under another. The most valuable in the lot, that of Patrick Henry, painted by Sully, was put out of its order to give it a better light.

All of the State's Governors are represented excepting Andrew Jackson resented excepting Andrew Jackson Montague. The place where his portrait should hang has been left vacant by Librarian McIlwaine, in the hope that thus the attention of the public will be directed to the omission.

It is proposed to give the entire buttation a simple course in field service for, say, ten days, to include actual marching, camping, use of field rations and manoeuvres.

This recommendation is made in a letter from Commandant Gleaves to Superintendent Nichols, in which he requests that the Adjutant-General he asked to supply tents and tent equipment for the men. Colonel Nichols says that he intends to take the troops on a march to Staunton, and, if weather and time neemed.

Weinmann was Danish consul-general at Hamburg last summer when Cook came to Copenhagen. As soon as he heard that Cook was about to be officially received he wired the Danish Minister of Foreign Affairs Ahleplat, relating to the Mulior affair. Ahleplat communicated Weinmann's telegram to the American minister, Egan, the committee of reception, and other officials. The story didn't make much impression on Egan, and as his attitude toward Cook was interpreted here as constituting full and preted here as constituting full and official guarantee for Cook, the Danish University authorities could not, it is claimed here, turn a cold shoulder to him

It was on account of Weinmann's telegram, however, says Minister Ahle-plat, that Cook did not receive either military honors or a decoration from the King.
